DEATH COMES TO MRS. SMITH BLACK

Dies Friday At Irvine--Was Well-Known In Breckenridge And Perry Counties--Just Fifty Years Of Age--Leaves Large Family.

FUNERAL HELD SUNDAY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Black, wife of Smith Black, died at Irvine last Friday. Her death was caused by cancer. She was just fifty years of age and was born near German Ridge, Ind. Her old home was at Stephensport, where her friends are many and she was well-known over the county. Nine years ago Mr. Black took her and their family to Irvine to live. She was a christian woman, a member of the Methodist church and did much for her children, who were devoted to her.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Jackson and the interment took place at Irvine.

Besides her husband she leaves three daughters, Nell and Sue Black and Mrs. Ollie Orr, of Fordsville; and four sons, John, Henry, David and W. L. Black.

Mrs. Black was the daughter of Mrs. Kathrine Plock, the woman who was famous for her old age and beautiful knitting. Her sisters are Mrs. Henry Kielman, of Oriole, Ind.; Mrs. John Clearwater, of Tell City, and her brothers are Phil Plock, of Stephensport, and Henry Plock, of Tell City.

COL. WALTON'S HAND- WRITING LIKE MUSIC.

Every once in a while somebody in Stanford receives a letter from Col. W. P. Walton, former editor of the Interior Journal, and now associate editor of the Lexington Herald. The recipients of such missives usually bring them to us to read, for we "set" his copy for many a year both by hand and on a linotype, and often we were the only man in the office who could read it. Which reminds us of a story he told on himself in the Herald the other day. A tramp printer hit Lexington and they put him on a machine to set some of Mr. Walton's editorials. The printer looked at it a while, turned it up-side down and studied it then went to the foreman and said: "If I had a cornet I might play this stuff, but I'm d-d if I can set it." At that we think Col. Walton's chirography is more legible than that of Editor Desha Breckinridge of the Herald or of Enoch Grehan another leading Lexington newspaper man, and we have "set" them all in days gone by.—Stanford Interior Journal.

Buys Home At Irvington.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe T. Mattingly have bought the Kemper bungalow at Irvington. It is now occupied by Mr. Chas. Hook and family, who will vacate as soon as they can get another house.

MISS CAIN WILL GO TO FOREIGN FIELDS

Miss Beverley Cain, formerly of Bewleyville, graduates at the Scarritt Training School, Kansas City next month. She will be consecrated as a missionary at the council meeting in St. Louis and will take orders for the foreign mission field.

Horace Smith Injured

Hawesville, Ky., April 22.—Horace Smith, of Lewisport, who is one of the best known and most extensive farmers and stock men in the county, suffered a compound fracture of the right arm near his home yesterday morning, as the result of being kicked by a fine horse. Mr. Smith was passing behind the animal at the time, and the injury was most unexpected.

May Go To Rome, Italy.

Miss Minnie Stith, a former Bewleyville girl, is a most successful nurse in Washington City. She is contemplating a trip to Rome, Italy, in a professional capacity, in the near future.

Mrs. Whitehouse Still Ill

Mrs. Rosa Whitehouse has been ill at her home for six weeks and her friends will regret to learn that her condition shows little improvement.

REVIVAL REACHES MENS' HEARTS

Practical, Sensible Sermons Delivered By The Reverend Mr. Brown--Mens' Prayer Meetings Held This Week.

ALL THE SERVICES GOOD

The religious revival that has been in progress for several days at the Methodist church under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Frank Lewis and Mr. Walter Brown, have stopped the people of Cloverport—stopped them at least, a minute, a half hour, or an hour or two each day and evening.

Every afternoon a woman's prayer meeting is held at two o'clock and followed by a regular service at 2:45. These services have been the sweetest, and the most spiritual held here for some time. Those who have been hungry and thirsty for "food and drink" that the heart craves, have relished the measureless benefits of these gatherings.

The men's prayer meetings are held every morning at 8:30 o'clock in the office of V. G. Babbage, and are being well attended by the business men. The thoughts and words, it is said, that have fallen at these meetings, have been as refreshing as drops of rain on a hot day.

The evening services open at 7:15 o'clock with a song service.

The sermons of the Rev. Mr. Brown are logical, not sensational, and appeal to practical people. He makes his points plain and drives them in the minds and hearts of men, like a man drives spikes in a railroad tie with a sledge hammer.

The revival closes Sunday evening.

STEAMBOAT CAPTAIN

Of Old Days Asked About Friends In Cloverport--Remembers Many Who Has Left The Port For Good

Capt. Westfall, an old time river man, and the best captain that ever walked the deck of a steam boat, was a passenger on a train Monday returning from a trip on the Tell City to Evansville. He asked about all his old friends, many of whom have passed away, in Cloverport. That was twenty three years ago but he still remembers them. He is now Superintendent of the Alms House in Louisville and is just so faithful to do his duties there as he was a steam boat man.

BURGLAR

Tries To Enter The Home Of Miss Drew Gregory Saturday Night--Shoots At His Legs.

Miss Drew Gregory was awakened about one o'clock Sunday morning by a burglar who was trying to enter her home in First street on the East Side. He made attempts to get in the window and Miss Gregory shot at his legs three times. The burglar dropped his hat and Chief DeHaven can possibly identify it.

PREACHERS FEAST

Cloverport Folks Are Showering Them With Invitations--More Chicken Than They Can Eat.

The Rev. Mr. Lewis and the Rev. Mr. Walter Brown have been extensively entertained since the revival opened at the Methodist church. They have had more invitations than they can accept and have taken them as they come. Their list is as follows: Mrs. Francis Marion Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Nolte, Mr. and Mrs. Wick Moorman, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Weatherholt, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Barry, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Moorman, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Babbage, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bowmer.

Sold Fine Hogs

Pierce Hardaway sold two Duroc Jersey hogs Saturday; one to Julius Sippel for $25 and the other to Sam Rice for $27.

THE LORD'S PRAYER

THE following beautiful composition was taken during the Civil War, in Charleston, S. C., by a brother of Mrs. S. R. Holmer, of Kendallville, Ind. It is printed on very heavy satin and is quite a literary curiosity:

THOU, to the Mercy Seat our souls doth gather
To do our duty unto Thee,

OUR FATHER,

To whom all praise, all honor should be given,
For Thou art the Great God

WHO ART IN HEAVEN,

Thou, by Thy wisdom, rul'st the world's whole frame Forever, therefore,

HALLOWED BE THY NAME;

Let nevermore delays divide us from Thy glorious grace, but let

THY KINGDOM COME,

Let Thy command, opposed by none,
But Thy Good pleasure and

THY WILL BE DONE,

And let our promptness to obey be even
The very same

ON EARTH AS 'TIS IN HEAVEN;

Then for our souls, O LORD, we also pray Thou would'st be pleased to GIVE US THIS DAY,

The food of life wherewith our souls are fed, Sufficient raiment, and

OUR DAILY BREAD,

With every needful thing do Thou relieve us,
And, of Thy mercy, pity

AND FORGIVE US

All our misdeeds for Him, whom Thou did'st please
To make an offering for

OUR TRESPASSES;

And for as much, O Lord, as we believe,
That Thou wilt pardon us

AS WE FORGIVE

Let that love teach wherewith Thou dost acquaint us
To pardon all

THOSE WHO TRESPASS AGAINST US

And though sometimes Th u find'st we have forgot
This love to Thee, yet help,

AND LEAD US NOT

Through soul or body's want to desperation,
Nor let earth's gain drive us

INTO TEMPTATION,

Let not the soul of any true believer
Fall into the time of trial,

BUT DELIVER

Yea, save them from the malice of the devil
And, both in life and death, keep

US FROM EVIL;

Thus pray we, Lord, for that of Thee, from whom This may be had

FOR THINE IS THE KINGDOM;

This world is full of Thy works, its wondrous story,
To Thee belongs

THE POWER AND GLORY

And all Thy Glorious works,

FOREVER, AMEN

This unique and lovely piece is set verbatim et literatim from a clipping that Mr. Courtney Babbage, Sr., has had twelve years. The last part of it was torn off and lost. Mr. Babbage offered it to us to be published during the Methodist Revival.

KETNUCKY PRESS

Will Hold Summer Meeting At Cerulean Springs June Nineteenth To Twenty-Third--Jackson And Estill Wanted Convention

At a meeting of a committee representing the Kentucky Press Association, in the Leather Room of the Seelbach Friday at noon to select a place for the annual meeting of the Kentucky Press Association. Cerulean Springs was agreed upon and the date set for June 19 to 23. Estill Springs and Jackson, Breathitt county, made efforts to land the convention.

H. Shinnick, of Shelbyville, was chairman of the meeting and Shelton Saufley, of the Stanford Journal, Secretary and Treasurer.

A SHOE-MAKER, A FIRE-MAN AND A FARMER.

Julius Sippel, of Irvington, is a man of three trades and works at all of them. He has a night run on the L. H. & St. L. branch. He also owns and runs a $1500 farm near Union Star, besides Mr. Sippel is a shoe maker and works at his shop all day at Irvington.

FREE SERVICE

To Cumberland Subscribers All Through Breckenridge County --Manager Harvill Giving Patrons Best Attention

The extension of free service to subscribers of the Cumberland Telephone Company is highly satisfactory to the patrons of Breckenridge county. Every subscriber has free service to all points in the county.

A. M. Harvill, Manager of the entire county exchange, has opened a free service to the following places:

Harned, Glen Dean, McQuady, Askins and Union Star.

Mr. Harvill is one of the best managers the company has ever had here and his untiring energy has accomplished much for the town and rural patrons of Breckenridge county.

If you have a telephone you can get free connection with any place in the county.

Wants To Be Lieutenant Governor

For a long time it looked like Mr. James P. Edwards, of Louisville, would be given a walkover for Lieutenant Governor, but all of a sudden the position seems to have taken on an added importance for certain politicians.

IRVINGTON COLLEGE WINS FIRST GAME

Opening Play Brings Defeat To Hardinsburg Juniors At Irvington--Both Teams Did Good Work--Winners Wear New Uniforms

LITTLE DILLON ALWAYS SMILES

Irvington, Ky., April 24 (Special)—Saturday afternoon the proud college boys dressed in their new uniforms, trotted out on the diamond fully confident of taking the first game of the season from the Hardinsburg boys.

The game started off with fast snappy playing on the part of the student players, who pulled off a nice double play in first inning. The visiting team held themselves together, fought fiercely and only crossed the rubber but one time, up to the fifth inning, while the home players already had five runs ahead.

Herndon's pitching proved a stumbling block for the Hardinsburg team until the sixth inning when he lost the excellent control which he had, allowing the visitors to hammer the sphere till they got in the lead; then they were held steady by Barr, who relieved Herndon.

The Hardinsburgers were now greatly encouraged, though the Irvington boys were still in the game. Lee Hook now relieved Hoben and with his excellent curve held the Irvington batters firm and steady. Although many errors on both sides were made, the game continued with great interest.

Little Dillon always wore a smile and made some excellent plays, and all the time kept encouraging his men. M. Brown was a great back stop, but became too excited and threw the ball away several times for the other boys. The out fielding of both teams was splendid, while the infielding was very strong. Each team got about the same number of clean base hits, but the Irvington boys were credited with the most stolen bases. The batting for the home boys was led by Lyon, who made five hits out of six times at bat, taking one triple, one double and three singles. Lee Hook only made one hit and that was a long drive over in center field fence making a home run.

The winning score for Irvington was made by Brashear after two men were out. The Hardinsburg boys said they got a square deal and wanted to play the college boys again.

DELAY LINCOLN MEMORIAL PLAN

Congressional Body Cannot Agree Upon Suitable Location.

$2,000,000 IS APPROPRIATED

Champ Clark Suggested That the People Be Asked to Decide the Matter, and Country's Trade Organization
Will Be Appealed to With That End
In View.

At the last session congress passed an appropriation of $2,000,000 for the erection of a memorial to Abraham Lincoln. A committee of seven members—namely, President Taft, Senators Cullom of Illinois, Wetmore of Rhode Island and Money of Mississippi and Representatives Cannon of Illinois,
McCall of Massachusetts and Champ Clark of Missouri—was designated to carry out the provisions of the resolution.

This committee so far has been unable to agree upon a location for the proposed memorial or its design. The question has been referred to the fine arts commission as an advisory body.
While the Lincoln memorial committee just named is the central authority in relation to the project, its powers are somewhat limited by an amendment adopted by the senate requiring approval by congress of the location and design of the memorial upon which the committee may finally decide.

How to Commemorate Lincoln.

The issue on which the committee divides is not a new one. The old Burnham park commission, the Roosevelt fine arts council and some members of the present fine arts commission all have approved the original park commission plan. This contemplated a memorial portico, surrounded with terraces, gardens and fountains, on the eastern bank of the Potomac.

This was in turn a feature and only one feature of a general plan for the beautiful and systematic development of Washington recommended by such great artists as Daniel H. Burnham, Charles F. McKim, Augustus Saint Gaudens and Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., who composed the original park commission. Their report was presented Jan. 15, 1902, and every year that has elapsed since then has confirmed the wisdom of their conclusions.

Commissioners Disagree.

The congressional committee appointed under the latest resolution is not altogether friendly to the park commission plan. Speaker Cannon long has avored a Lincoln memorial between the Union station and the capitol notwithstanding that a statue of Christopher Columbus is now being made to go on the plaza in front of the station.

Senator Wetmore and Representative
McCall are, or have been, advocates of this site. President Taft is strongly for the park commission project.
The position of Senators Cullom and Money is not known. Champ Clark has defined his own views with the suggestion that the people of the country should decide what form the memorial should take and where it should be placed. The committee has held several meetings which have resulted in no agreement, and, as stated, the opinion of the fine arts commission has been asked.

Let the People Decide.

Oddly enough, the suggestion of Champ Clark, whether offered seriously or not, has been taken up. It has been decided by friends of the Potomac site to state their case to the country and ask for a popular verdict on the question. They hold that the idea of a memorial to Lincoln is one of national interest and importance and that as the local authorities can arrive at no conclusion the matter should be submitted to the people. The Washington chamber of commerce has volunteered to communicate with the trade organizations of the country with reference to the project, and a committee consisting of about seventy-five of the leading men and women of Washington, few of them holders of public office, has been appointed to carry on the work.

When a medicine must be given to young children, it should be pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is made from loaf sugar, and the roots used in its preparation gives it a flavor similar to maple syrup, making it pleasant to take. It has no superior for colds, croup and whooping cough. For sale by all dealers.

OLIVE OIL AND ONIONS.

Eat 'Em and Avoid Fever and Diphtheria, Says Health Expert.

Dr. Frederick A. Kraft, the Socialist health commissioner of Milwaukee, believes that he has discovered that eating onions and olive oil is preventive of scarlet fever and diphtheria.

It is a fact that the districts where onions are largely used have been free from these diseases the past year.
When the comparative statement by wards of the prevalence of scarlet fever and diphtheria was submitted to the health commissioner he noticed that the wards populated by Italians and foreigners were more free from the diseases than the American districts. The Italian ward did not have a single case of either disease, while the exclusive Prospect Hill district was most generally affected.

The health commissioner then investigated every family where either disease was found. No family where a case of either disease was found used onions.

PLATINUM THE THING.

Its Use as Fashionable Metal Dictated by Jewelers.

An edict of the National Wholesale Jewelers' association names platinum as the precious metal upon which men and women of wealth shall hereafter lavish their surplus cash.

Platinum, which is more rare and expensive than gold, has heretofore been used chiefly for expensive diamond settings. Henceforth it is to be used in all kinds of smaller articles, such as stickpins and studs for men and earrings, brooches, rings, chains and bracelets for women. Hard platinum costs wholesale $42 and the soft variety costs from $38 to $40 an ounce.
The retail price ranges from $52 to $60 an ounce. This makes the new metal especially desirable, according to the jewelers, as it is calculated to be almost, if not quite, beyond the reach of persons of ordinary means.

DRYDOCK FOR WHALES.

Device Is to Be Used For Keeping Carcasses Afloat After Capture.

The only known "drydock for whales" has been ordered built at the Western Boat works, Long Beach, Cal., and Captain E. E. Dodge, proprietor of the boat works, is hauling from San Pedro 35,000 feet of lumber, which will be required to build the barge. It will be 30 by 70 feet in size and will cost $2,500.

"I am to build the barge for J. D.
Loop, launch owner and whale hunter," said Captain Dodge. "He calls it a drydock for whales. I understand he will use it to buoy up whales that he may capture in the future as well as use it for a landing at the side of big ships which may anchor in the bay."

SAM LOYD, THE PUZZLE MAKER

He Was Inventor of the Famous
"Pigs in Clover."

AMASSED A LARGE FORTUNE.

Known as the Puzzle King, He Set Problems That Taxed the Ingenuity of the World For Two Generations. The Donkey Made Him the Most Money.

Sam Loyd, the puzzle man, whose puzzles have taxed the minds of the whole world for almost two generations, died recently at his home in Brooklyn. He had made a fortune out of his puzzles and died a very wealthy man.

It was as the "puzzle king" that Sam Loyd was best known, but besides being a puzzle maker he was an artist of some ability, an inventor of mechanical devices, a writer, a chess player of great proficiency and a profound mathematician. His ability in the latter field was at the bottom of much of his success as a puzzle maker.

He was born in Philadelphia in 1841 of an old Quaker family and at the age of ten was playing chess with some of the cracks of the country and often beating them. First he studied engineering, and then he studied mathematics and languages at Heidelberg. But all the while he was making puzzles for his own amusement and to perplex his friends. When he was twenty-five years old he became a professional puzzle maker, conducting a puzzle department in various newspapers for many years thereafter and spreading his fame to the far corners of the earth.

Most Famous Puzzles.

The two most famous puzzles invented by Sam Loyd were "pigs in clover" and the fifteen puzzle. His puzzles were divided into two general classes—namely, those requiring manual dexterity and those requiring mental dexterity. Many folks throughout the world got the pigs into the right place at the expense of their nervous systems, but nobody ever solved the fifteen puzzle. It had occurred to Loyd while trying an old Hindu puzzle of the magic square. Famous mathematicians sought to work it out all over the world, but their solutions never came right, according to its author. Mr. Loyd afterward said that he never made any money out of his fifteen block puzzle because he was unable to have it copyrighted, nor did he out of the "pigs in clover." One store alone sold 100,000 sets of his block puzzle when the craze was on.

The puzzle out of which this inventor of brain twisters made the most money was the donkey puzzle, in which the object was to put two jockeys on the backs of two donkeys. This he patented and sold in large quantities. The facility with which his brain could turn out puzzles of such a kind as to baffle the keenest mind and give half the world headaches was shown when he turned out the pony puzzle. It was turned out in response to a bet made by a governor of Pennsylvania, while returning on the same steamer from Europe with the puzzle maker in 1868. The governor had challenged Loyd to produce a new puzzle before the passengers in the smoking room. Loyd took a pencil, drew a pony and cut him up into three pieces. The pony was galloping before he cut it up, but the thing was to make it gallop afterward. The governor offered a reward then for anybody to solve it on the voyage, but nobody did and not many afterward.

Invaded England.

P. T. Barnum heard of this puzzle and ordered 10,000,000 for advertising use. The showman traveled around with the solution in his pocket, as he could not remember it overnight, he said. In the end 1,000,000,000 copies of the puzzle were sold. This and some of the others netted him a great deal of money, which he shrewdly invested in real estate and in good securities, with the result that he amassed a large fortune. Shortly after turning out the "disappearing Chinaman" he went to Europe and introduced his puzzles to the English newspapers. Immediately all England started to work over them.

Hundreds of chess problems were turned out by Sam Loyd, whose first prize for a maker of these was taken when he was eleven years old. He was the author of "Chess Strategy," one of the most popular works on the game. Turning to the mechanical field, he invented such puzzles as the chair puzzle and the star puzzle, almost impossible of solution.

NOTICE.

Please do not ask us to send you the News without paying for it cash in advance.—John D. Babbage.

UNDER OUR OWN ROOF

Last week some one asked "Why they did not put 'that' in the paper?" This question is asked nearly every week by subscribers and non-subscribers because an item has failed to appear in the News. Before asking this question, please ask yourself, "Did I tell News about that?" Then if a notice is not in the paper, enquire of the editor or the assistant editor why—ask no one else, because no one else knows.

Do not depend on anyone telling us about your good fortune, your pleasant visit, your business promotions, etc., tell us yourself. We always want to hear the best.

Remember that only bad news travels fast. If we wrote all the bad things we heard every week, the News would be a sorry old paper.

Write us everything good about yourself, telephone us or "stop in" the office and let us know about your friends. Help us to make the News a "live-wire", a paper that entertains, that is worth reading after it goes on the pantry shelf.

ASPHALT FOR ROADS.

Will Make Excellent Binding, Says London Engineer.

Cecil Nathan, an engineer of London who gives especial attention to roadmaking, expresses the belief that asphalt is destined to take the place of tar as a binder of macadam roads. He defines the "essential desiderata" of a satisfactory road as "smooth appearance and even surface following the camber of the road, which must be sanitary, dustless, noiseless and nonslippery." Mr. Nathan also stipulates that the ideal road must not only have these qualities, but be reasonable in initial cost and above all in maintenance.

"Many of the present generation will remember the phrase, 'Electricity is only in its infancy,' says Mr. Nathan. 'Well, today the road board is in its infancy, and I have no doubt that it will grow into as fine and healthy a child as electricity did. Like other infants, the road board is just beginning to speak, and the first word that it has been taught is 'tar.' Now, I hope it will very soon grow up and learn words of two syllables, such as 'asphalt,' and then be able to expound to road engineers the real meaning of this much misunderstood word.

"This is the tar age, and as an indifferent palliative tar is serving its purpose today as a temporary expedient, but something much more permanent than the primitive methods of tar spraying or even tar macadam is required for the future, and I maintain that permanency will be obtained only from the adoption as waterproof road crust binders of either Lake Trinidad asphalt or Cuban asphalt, but preferably Cuban asphalt, owing to its having a higher melting point and its ability to withstand the rotting effects of water."

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT STILL PROGRESSING HERE

The good road movement is growing in this county. Father Knue's plans are being taken up in several sections of the county and good results are sure to come from it. Hawkins Smith tells the News that he and Henry Dowell have planned to grade the road from Dent's bridge to Garfield by the help of those along the road. Several already have pledged teams to grade and haul rock. We are surely glad to note this upward move in road improvement. It is the best move a farmer ever made for his own advancement

o o o o

John Cook and Alf Taylor, of Custer, and George Milburn and Hawkins Smith, of Garfield, would be a fine team to inaugurate the good road movement on the Custer and Garfield road. This is one of the most important roads in the county and its improvement is needed badly. The matter of good roads is wholly with the people. When they determine in their own good way to have them then they will become good roads and must first start at every man's door.

o o o o

At McDaniels $500.00 in cash has been raised by the farmers' hands, and teams have been pledged for work on the roads. Judge Waggoner says the county will come to the aid of all movements of this kind and will help.

IS THE MAN WORTH ADVERTISING?

We admire the advertising plan that Mr. Addams is using in his political campaign for several reasons. First because it helps us. As Col. Walton writes in the Lexington Herald: "There is one thing that can be said of candidate Addams in addition to many others, and that is that he does not go around asking newspapers to boost him for nothing". All candidates should emulate his example and unless they do, the editors should have wisdom enough to leave them alone. We have been giving away our space to candidates long enough. There is always money used in a campaign and instead of the money being spent for whiskey, big dinners, fine cigars and votes, it should be spent for that which is valuable and honorable; that is newspaper advertising space. Is the candidate a man worth advertising? This is the important question for the editor to decide. If he is not, we should turn down his orders for advertising as quickly as we refuse for audads.

Julius C. Nolte was appointed local registrar for Cloverport last January and the News has not even mentioned his appointment. Why? Simply because we didn't know it until last week. This is the reason that any matter of importance is not mentioned in the paper. Mr. Nolte understood the reason his appointment was not noticed, but there are thousands of people who are always wondering why they are not recognized by the newspapers. It is a person's own fault if he is not noticed by the press. Someone remarked the other day that only aristocrats got their names in the paper. The idea is preposterous. Anybody can get his name in the paper provided he jumps over the moon or does something worth noticing that the editor hears about. The newspaper reporter has ears to hear and eyes to see, but unless you tell or show him, don't blame him or wonder why he has left you out of his stories. The sooner the people learn that a reporter cannot write what he knows not and the sooner they co-operate with him, in giving him facts, notes, kind words and courteous treatment, the more perfect will be the newspaper. Life is just one favor after another; if you favor the newspaper men and women, they will gladly favor you and your friends.

Our correspondent, Mrs. C. D. Hambelton, of Mattingly writes: "Balltown has no Federated Club, but has many energetic women who do not mind work. No small town can boast of more attractive front yards or cleaner back yards than Balltown. She is up-to-date". We are pleased to publish these good words in behalf of Balltown. We remember driving through the village one summer several years ago and in our memory the place is one of comeliness and cleanliness. The homes had vines and flowers, and the porches were swept clean. Where there is a woman, who is a worker and manager, there is always a clean home inside and out. We notice in most of our towns it is the business section that is poorly kept. So few business houses have clean back premises. Let us hear from the town that has clean yards behind its business houses.

Mr. Bryan has turned down a $2,000,000 offer to move the Commoner to Memphis. His newspaper is so successful that we take it he does not have to go down to the station personally to see who goes by the four o'clock train.—Lexington Leader.

We would rather be assistant editor of the News and have to go to the up train occasionally to see who is going and coming. There is lots of fun in not being rich, just so you don't look "pore".

The cold wet weather is playing havoc with the tobacco plants. We hear of a number of beds that have been plowed up and resowed.

POLITENESS WON SHOW

TICKETS FOR HIM.

A great many people in this city remember Col. Garrett Crittenden, "the colored man sah", who excelled in politeness any darkey those days in Kentucky. The colonel belonged to an aristocratic family previous to war times. Dan Rice, the famous showman, came to Cloverport once with his great show tents and things, and Rice himself passing up the street happened to come in contact with Col. Crittenden, and the old darkey made so many elegant bows and scrapes to the showman that he declared that Crittenden sah, was the politest negro in the United States. This pleased Crittenden, of course, and when the showman pulled out a complimentary show ticket and handed it to him, Mr. Crittenden fairly

A SHORT VISIT TO THE CLOVERPORT FOUNDRY.

If you take a walk down the railroad some fine day this spring be certain to pay your respects to the Cloverport Foundry. It is one of the best equipped shops on the Ohio river. The new carpenter's department, the tin shop and the brass foundry are the recent additions and each one turns out first-class workmanship and materials.

Albert McGaughn is the head carpenter and pattern maker and Tom Faith is overseer of the brass moulds. The brass foundry has a $3000 per year contract with the L. H. & St. L. R. R.

In the main machine shop with foreman Jim Bishop, are Milton Squires and Fred May. Ed. Stocker and Forrest Moorman look after the tin shop.

"R. T. Kendall" is the name of the new boat that is being built by the Foundry for Rounds & Jesse of Owensboro. It will be finished by the first of June. The vessel is 20x90 feet and will carry 300 people.

"We may be slower than anybody else, but our work shows up as well," said Mr. Pate, the general manager of the Foundry, Friday. "Our business is a good thing, it is growing every day, all we need is more room". Mr. Pate said, as he pointed to one part of the foundry crowded with iron materials.

A Romance
Of Drussenland

CHAPTER X.

I HAD put everything upon the hazard of a die, and kneeling, I awaited the result. There was absolute silence—it seemed to me for a long time—and I could feel that the chamber was charged with an atmosphere of expectancy. At such a moment one takes in many things at a glance. Count Vasca was furious. I saw a curious smile wringle the corners of Jasar's mouth, and, although I did not understand its meaning, there was in it something which encouraged me. I was conscious that Lady Aldrida stepped back from me, a movement that indeed suggested fear at my rashness.

I saw the princess start, and then the color dyed her cheeks deeply, but there was no encouragement in her face. For one moment it seemed as if she remembered the giving of the handkerchief, but the next she was stern, resolute, and I might have been some poor devil craving mercy for myself. Her eyes flashed dangerously, her mouth tightened hard and unforgettingly, her bosom rose and fell in quick movement, telling of a passionate anger which she held in check. She looked superb, but less a woman than I had ever seen her look. Just then she would have inspired fear, but hardly love, I think. My sudden action seemed to have put the key of the situation into my hand for the moment, but her dignity and self-possession snatched it from me. Then she spoke clearly, calmly.

"A token must be given to make it of any worth. This handkerchief, as we remember, was merely forgotten when, as a stranger among us, we gave you a word of sympathy. Had we known the use you intended to put it to we should have sent a servant to reclaim it. Never has any subject received a token of ours. You forget yourself, Sir Verrall, and in future we shall know how to treat you. It were well to absent yourself from our presence until we have forgotten the insult."

Then, turning to one of her women, she commanded her to take the handkerchief. Those about me bowed low as the princess passed from the room followed by her attendants.

Not until the curtains had fallen behind her did I rise from my knee. It was not homage which kept me there. I wanted a moment to think. I had done the wretched prisoners no good, but I had made the attempt, and since it had failed I should have more enemies in Drussenland than I had ever had before.

Jasar had gone. Vasca was leaving the apartment hurriedly, and those standing near me drew back as I crossed the room.

At the entrance Lady Aldrida stopped me.

"We attempted the impossible, Sir Verrall. I warned you that I was in no great favor with her highness."

"We have done what we could," I answered. "Take heed to yourself, Lady Aldrida. It is ill policy to sympathize with a fallen and disgraced man."

"That man is my"—

"Is a fool, my lady," I interrupted. "I am in no mood for talking of it now."

She dropped me a low courtesy, and I went quickly through the other rooms, neither being spoken to nor speaking to any.

As I was leaving the palace, however, a hand was laid upon my shoulder, and I turned to face a friend, a knight who had ever taken part with me against my enemies.

"Sir Verrall, let me come with you," I warned you I am poor company tonight," I answered.

"Two swords are better than one when the night is dark and the attack sudden and from behind."

"Why should you fear attack tonight?"

"The town is full of drunken soldiers, and a fallen man is food for any assassin's dagger. The murderer may be thanked for getting rid of so turbulent a subject—or thinks he may."

I laughed at his somber foreboding, but I was not ill pleased to have his company. His presence may have protected me, I do not know, but I reached my quarters in safety.

O'Ryan was not there. I guessed that the attractions of the town had proved too much for him tonight, and I was not sorry to be alone. I crossed the room and looked out upon the market place. The sounds of merry-making run to riot rose up to me. The dawn would bring the chanting priests, the flashing swords and the stakes with their ghastly burdens. What could I do more to prevent the butchery? Nothing—absolutely nothing. I had played my trump card and lost.

Not only had I not helped the prisoners, but I had put my own life in jeopardy. I had no mercy to hope for from the princess, and I could not expect the priests to raise a finger in my protection now that I had attempted to wreck one of their dearest laws. Should I go to the priests and, playing upon their superstition, command them to save their prisoners? Should I steal out, mount my horse, ride to Yadasara and proffer my services to lead the king's troops to victory against their enemies? Should I go back to the palace and attempt to speak again with the princess? And then, I regret to say, I wondered if the lives of these prisoners were worth the sacrifice I had made for them, whether I should not have been wiser to take O'Ryan's advice and look after my own skin.

Presently I realized that the town had grown quieter. Listening for O'Ryan, I heard something else—stealthy footsteps coming along the corridor. Under the circumstances it was not strange that I should think of treachery. I drew my sword noiselessly and waited. There was a quick knock at my door.

"Who comes at so late an hour?" I said, throwing the door open and ready to defend myself.

"Welcome you all your friends so, Sir Verrall!"

It was Jasar, and he smiled as he pointed to my drawn sword.

"I expected a foe."

"And perhaps with reason," he said. "Still, I come as a friend and secretly. Close the door and make it fast and let us speak low. Your servant has not returned?"

"No."

"And will not tonight. He was found brawling in the streets and was arrested."

"I thought soldiers were privileged to brawl tonight," I said.

"Some—not all."

"You mean that only my servant was arrested?"

He bowed and watched me with a smile upon his face, even as he had watched me as I pleaded to the princess.

"By Vasca's orders, doubtless?"

"Doubtless."

"Ah, for a few moments with him to settle our score now and for all time!" I said impatiently.

"What can you expect? A fallen man is ever a stepping stone which others use to rise to higher favor."

"Fallen, you say! It is too rash an assertion. Falling, perhaps, but not fallen. When Sir Verrall completely falls he'll carry some ruin with him."

"Brave words—an idle boast I should have said had another uttered them. But Sir Verrall has proved himself as good as his words. Tell me, are all men as you are in the land you come from?"

"I am but a poor specimen of my countrymen," I answered. And then I stopped, remembering how I had come to Drussenland as the long expected knight.

"We must talk of that another time," he answered, with a smile. "Now we have other matters in hand. You are right, Sir Verrall. You have not fallen yet, but there are those who think you have."

"You mean"—I began.

"Mark you, Sir Verrall, you were unwise tonight."

"To plead for those wretched prisoners?"

"No. For that I honor you. It was the action of a true knight. The law is a disgrace. I quarrel not with your pleading, but with the manner of it."

"It was the only way."

"There you are in error," he answered. "First you should have come alone. To associate Lady Aldrida with the request was to court failure. Then you should not have asked for an immediate answer. Her highness cannot make and break laws at her pleasure. Your importunity made her resist you."

"Made her doubt my loyalty," I said bitterly. "Had a man so accused me I would have cut out his lying tongue."

"You gave the challenge, Sir Verrall, and since none dared to answer it you had the advantage. But you did not use it. You turned to sneer at the princess. Think you any woman can bear that?"

"My knowledge of women is limited."

"True, I have found it so. You should learn to read women, Sir Verrall, and then you would know how to use your advantage. The princess, after all, is a woman."

I looked at him, trying to discover a deep meaning in his words, but Jasar's face was not easy to read.

"I used the weapons to my hand," I said.

"And used them badly—your last weapon worst of all. It was bravely done, but it was madness just then."

"I am no courtier where the lives of men are at stake."

"When you should be the courtier most. Yet you do yourself an injustice. I marked you play the courtier well enough to the Lady Aldrida, and the princess saw it also. I can read on the Lady Aldrida's face what the man who whispers to her talks of. I speak well that you talked of love."

"And if I did?"

"Was it wise, think you, to produce the princess' token when you had proved how lightly you esteemed it?"

This was an argument I could not find a ready answer to without showing this priest, of whose friendship I had no guarantee, that I thought more of the princess than I cared to acknowledge.

"She denied the gift," he went on. "She could truly do so, for I saw the manner in which it was given. You could expect nothing else but her anger and the banishment she pronounced."

"I have fought and lost, as many another man has done before me."

"You have not lost yet, Sir Verrall. I was tonight sent to the priests by her highness. The sacrifice of the prisoners is delayed for the present."

"Thank heaven!" I exclaimed.

"So far you have succeeded. It is possible—may, probably—that the princess will send for you. Be humble; it will serve you best. Of my coming here you must not speak."

"I thank you for coming."

"For the present the prisoners are safe. You may save them altogether, but in doing so you must be content to put yourself in danger. I know not how her highness will treat you, whether she will forgive you or no, but of this I warn you—if you save the prisoners the priests will be your enemies. They are powerful—more powerful even than Count Vasca to do you harm. I know you to be fearless; I believe you to be true. But mark well how you go after sunset. And one more thing, Sir Verrall—make no other enemies. A foe in steel or even in priestly robes may be met and conquered, but a woman—she has weapons that a man is ill fitted to guard against. I seek no confidence; I only advise. Beware of the Lady Aldrida. There is a whole armory of danger in that fair woman."

"You wrong her. I dare swear that you wrong her."

She had stood by me. I could do no less than protect her.

"I have given my advice," he said calmly. "It is for you to use it or not, as you will. Good night. When I am gone, Vasca will be the door again. For you danger lurks in every shadow. At some other time we will talk of that country of yours. It should be a good land whose knights are fearless and true and yet gentle as you are, Sir Verrall—a good land, indeed."

CHAPTER XI.

I CLOSED the door and fastened it and stretched myself upon my couch, intending to keep awake. The walls around me might not be as solid as they looked, but I was weary. My Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

nerves had been at high tension for hours, and nature asserted herself.

Sunlight filled the room when I awoke, and my first thought was one of thankfulness that no tragedy was to be enacted in the square that morning. My next thought was of O'Ryan. That he had been arrested by Vasca's orders as an insult to me I had no doubt, but I could see no way of avenging the insult at present.

Bearing the priest's warning in mind, I went out, little during the next three days. I attended to my duties in the camp and visited the guardroom each morning, but did not linger to gossip with any of my comrades. It was on the third day that I met Count Vasca. He approached me in the most friendly manner. "You have my sympathy regarding the other night, Sir Verrall," he said. "Most of us know what it is to be temporarily under a cloud. You have heard doubtless that her highness is wavering with regard to the prisoners?"

"I hear little since I am banished from the court," I answered.

"I thought Lady Aldrida might have kept you informed of what was going forward."

"I have not seen her since that night, Sir Vasca. Besides, is she not under as heavy a cloud as I am?"

"The selfsame cloud, Sir Verrall, but it will pass. You were unfortunate enough to offend her highness somewhat, but I have some power with her, being her kinsman, and will speak for you and for the lady."

"You are generous, count, but I would sooner plead my own cause."

"As you will. I offered as a friend."

That day O'Ryan returned, and, feeling that I owed him some explanation as to why I had not used every endeavor to release him, I told him of my banishment.

"The prisoners may live, but they'll be the death of us, Verrall, unless you're careful. I wasn't bawling the other night. For the life of me I could not make out why I was arrested, but now it is all explained. Once you are thoroughly out of favor we may as well commit suicide to prevent a worse end."

"There is always Yadasara as refuge," I suggested.

"Aye, if we can get there. I ask nothing better. But we've got to get there, Verrall."

That evening the princess sent for me. I had just concluded that my suspense was not to be relieved that day when one of the princess' guard came.

"Her highness' orders, and will you follow me, Sir Verrall?"

We crossed the great hall, which was in darkness, and went along many corridors with many turnings, so that I should have been quite unable to retrace my steps.

Presently we stopped, apparently in the middle of a corridor.

"A moment, Sir Verrall. I will inquire her highness' pleasure."

He drew back a sliding door in the wall, entered a dimly lighted apartment and closed the door after him.

Only a minute or two elapsed before the door was opened again, and the man beckoned me.

I entered a small anteroom almost bare of furniture and dimly lighted, but I had no time to take particular note of anything, for the guard immediately drew aside the curtains which hung over a door at the opposite end of the room, and I stood in a large apartment and in the presence of the princess.

She was half reclining upon a couch, and had she studied the pose she could not have chosen one more attractive. Jasar was seated near her, and they were alone, but it seemed to me that others had been there recently, for the rugs on two or three couches in the room were askew, as though the occupants had risen hastily. I wondered who had been with the princess, for it was evident that I had been brought there secretly.

The princess moved slightly to indicate that she was aware of my coming, and, feeling rather insignificant before this beautiful woman, I approached and fell on my knee before her.

"You have angered me extremely, Sir Verrall," she said, "and I know not whether I have acted rightly in sending for you now."

"I crave your pardon, your highness, and ask for your good will again."

"You have my pardon. My good will you must deserve."

"Your highness has only to command," I answered.

She bid me rise and motioned me to be seated. I sat down a little removed from her.

"As I have forgiven I will not speak of the other night. In your country courtesy may find a different expression from that which it has here in Drussenland. You are but a stranger among us and have therefore, perchance, some excuse."

"Pardon, your highness, but if I may claim any excuse let me claim the one which prompted my hasty action."

"And that?"

"Your highness expressed a doubt of my loyalty. Your words cut so deeply that I acted rashly."

"You acted rashly indeed, but that is forgiven. We will speak no more of it. The prisoners you pleaded for have not yet been put to death. Thus far you have persuaded me, yet I know not how to act. As princess, as the rightful sovereign of Drussenland, I can only administer the law; as a woman I can hate the law, and this, which demands the sacrifice of prisoners, is most hateful, cruel and unjust. I wanted no stranger knight to tell me this."

"I have made my petition; I will urge you no more," I answered.

"Regretting that I have urged so much?" she asked.

"Nay, your highness, but I have used all my weapons. I can now only bow to your decision."

"It had been better had you reserved

MY DAUGHTER WAS CURED

Baltimore, Md.—"I send you here with the picture of my fifteen year old daughter Alice, who was restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was pale, with dark circles under her eyes, weak and irritable. Two different doctors treated her and called it Green Sickness, but she grew worse all the time. Lydia E. My last weapon until now, Sir Verrall. As a woman it might have had power to move me; it was powerless to move the princess. I have sent for you secretly tonight. My women had retired before you came, and only Jasar and the guard have knowledge of your coming. You will not speak of it, either. Have you thought of the consequences to yourself if I save the lives of these prisoners?"

"I have, but I am not afraid."

"The priests clamor for the sacrifice. The people clamor for it. You have had many enemies, Sir Verrall, since first you came to Drussenland, but with the priests against you, and with the priests a great mass of the people, how think you you can stand? For my council in this matter there will be no mercy."

"I have a religion, too, your highness, and mercy is its very keystone. I were indeed false to my religion were I not to stand up for the lives of these prisoners, and, as for the danger to myself, it counts for nothing. Besides, these same priests have accepted me as the expected knight. That should make my person sacred to them."

"Even the expected knight will not be allowed to break the laws of Drussenland with impunity," she said.

"But for their own sakes they cannot deny me now. It would rob the people of their belief in the priests."

"They will not deny you, but they will seek for means to correct their mistake without confusion to themselves."

"Your highness, it would seem, has little faith in the priests," I said gravely.

"Sir Verrall, I have a spirit within me which cries out for something more than legend—why I know not, except it be from the teaching of Jasar, who is called unorthodox and would be in a sorry plight among his brethren had he not my protection."

"Your highness speaks truly," said Jasar.

"May I not claim the same protection?" I asked.

"I am almost powerless to protect you. I know not how long I may have any power at all. There are those who love not a woman to rule, and that she breaks the laws may be an occasion to rise against her. It would be good to lay aside the golden circle that stamps me sovereign and be as other women—always a woman and never a princess."

"That is not well said, your highness," said Jasar. "You were born to rule, and your duty lies in ruling."

"Ah, let me forget that I am more than a woman if it pleases me," she said petulantly, and then she became calm again. "Yours was a strange coming among us."

"It was indeed strange," I answered. "There is a reason in legend," she went on in a dreamy manner. "Legend is the surface meaning perhaps of the deeper truths which lie beneath. When the priests, speaking by their legends, proclaimed you the expected knight, the savior of this country of ours, they may have proclaimed a truth greater than they understood."

"I have thought that, your highness," I answered.

"Tomorrow, Sir Verrall, I will command that the prisoners be released, let whatever danger come. Tomorrow I will send for you, and see that you forget not to crave my pardon publicly, even as publicly you angered me. Tonight has satisfied the woman; tomorrow satisfy the princess."

I fell upon my knee.

"You say you are almost powerless to protect me, but I am not powerless to protect you. In your danger claim me; I have a life to give. It is yours when you claim it."

"Loyal, I believe you," she answered. "As your princess I trust you. Yet I do not forget her who has a greater claim. Love shoots at queer marks sometimes. You are forgiven, and I shall receive back the Lady Aldrida into favor."

"Your highness"—I began rising to my feet.

"You need not thank me. You will go as you came, Sir Verrall."

Jasar touched my arm and led me to the door, and I was shown to my quarters.

There was a council next day, and I expected to be called to it. I was in readiness to attend, ready to meet the opposition which was certain to be raised when the question of the prisoners' lives was discussed, but I was not sent for. I kept to my quarters, impatient at the delay, wondering if the princess had regretted her determination of last night to save the prisoners and to recall me.

Late in the evening I was summoned to the palace. I passed through the streets unnoticed, but as soon as I entered the palace I was aware how unpopular I had become. I made my way at once to the room where the princess was, and there I was more kindly welcomed. Discretion, I knew, prompted this, for since the princess had recalled me it would have been unwise for those in closest attendance upon her to show any displeasure. I saw Lady Aldrida at some distance from me and was not displeased that she did not approach me. The princess was talking brightly to those close to her, but it seemed to me that she was exerting herself to appear at her ease, that her words were far from expressing what was passing through her mind.

Presently Jasar spoke to her, and her eyes wandered until they rested upon me. With a look and an almost imperceptible gesture she motioned me to approach.

I fell on my knee before her as I had done last night, and I smiled to myself to think that I had already been forgiven and that this was only a show. She used almost the same words, but she spoke as the princess, not as the woman, and I was certainly unprepared for the use she was going to make of the situation.

"You have greatly angered us, Sir Verrall," she said in low but clear voice. There was silence in the great room in a moment. "By word and action you have sought to disparage our majesty and to make our authority of none effect. It was in our mind to make your banishment if not forever, at least for a much longer time, but seeing that you are a stranger among us, knowing our customs imperfectly, and that your words and actions may have been ill considered rather than ill meant, we have recalled you that slowly you may prove the loyalty of which you are so quick to boast. Learn, Sir Verrall, that he whose hand goes most readily to his sword to defend his honor is not of necessity the man whose honor needs least defending."

"I humbly crave your highness' pardon and thank you for your clemency. My deeds shall speak my thanks in better fashion."

"Rise. You have our pardon. See that you deserve our good will." And then, speaking a little louder, she went on: "It is indeed a time for men to prove their loyalty to their sovereign, when her actions tear hoarse disagreement from the throats of many, when the rabble in the street think fit to criticize, soldiers in the camp to whisper threats and even some at court to murmur. My actions are framed for the good of Drussenland, for the welfare of its people, high and low, and I shall be quick to deal with those, be they who they may, who attempt to thwart me. If I have hitherto erred upon the side of mercy let it serve as warning to those who cry out dissatisfaction. I may yet err upon the side of severity."

INTERESTING INCIDENTS AT OLD FORT SUMTER

By Captain GEORGE L. KILMER.
[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

It was a moment of interest to the little band in Fort Sumter when at 10:00 a. m. of January 1861, the news reached them that a large steamer flying the United States flag was off the bar of the harbor, two or three miles distant. Every one was afraid the garrison was to be taken away. The men talked it over at breakfast, but even while they were talking the vessel was rapidly steaming up the channel. Then every man climbed to the ramparts, but there was no excitement. Suddenly a blue puff of smoke from a hidden battery a little more than a mile from Sumter showed plainly that the Confederates in Charleston had their opinion of the strange steamer, the famous Star of the West. The curiosity of the men was changed to a determination to get ready for battle. The roll call was beaten. Sumter batteries were manned almost before the men of the hidden battery had fired a second shot. The Star of the West came abreast of Fort Moultrie. The third shot was fired at the steamer. At that the Star of the West put about and started to sea, again receiving still further fire from the hidden battery as it passed. That was the last of the Star of the West in the much talked of re-enforcements to the garrison sent up in Sumter.

BRIGADIER GENERAL JAMES CHESNUT, JR., C. S. A., WHO CARRIED SEVERAL FLAGS OF TRUCE TO FORT SUMTER.

It was while the excitement over the danger to the magazines from red-hot shells fired by the Confederates April 13 was at its height that Colonel Wigfall, ex-United States senator from Texas, came into the fort. As a cannoner approached the embrasure to load his gun he discovered a man looking in from the outside. There was a short but lively altercation between the stranger and the cannoner, the former pleading that he be taken in lest he should be killed by his own shot and shell. He handed the cannoner his sword, to which was attached a white handkerchief. Once inside he asked to be taken before Major Anderson. To him he said, "For God's sake, major, let this thing stop! There has been enough bloodshed already." Anderson replied seriously. There must have been times later when the ludicrous side of this episode caused him to smile. Said he: "There has been none on my side, and, besides, your batteries are still firing on me."

Wigfall answered, "I'll soon stop that." Reaching for the handkerchief on his sword, he said to the cannoner, "Wave it out there!" The cannoner handed the sword to its owner, saying in substance, "Wave it yourself." The colonel proposed to wave it out of the embrasure, but Anderson told him that would be useless. It would better be done on the parapet. It ended in Anderson sending the flag to the parapet to be waved at the request of Colonel Wigfall. This was about the middle of the afternoon on the 13th, and when the flag appeared the firing on both sides gradually ceased. This was in reality the end of the whole matter, but it was so informal that the tension of the nerves of the officers and men in Fort Sumter was by no means relieved. The flag had not been struck. There had been no orders to cease firing.

Beauregard's Dispatch Bearer. There were several missions sent out by Beauregard to Major Anderson before and after the lowering of the flag. In all of them one man was conspicuous. That was Captain James Chesnut, afterward a Confederate general. Captain Chesnut was one of three aids who went to the fort under a white flag on April 11 to demand surrender. The demand was refused.

About 1 o'clock on the morning of the 12th Captain Chesnut again appeared at Sumter and remained there until past 3 o'clock, awaiting Major Anderson's reply. He had orders in his pocket to the commander of the batteries on James island to open fire in case Anderson remained firm in his purpose to hold the fort. On leaving he placed in Anderson's hand a written notice that the hostile guns would open in one hour. These trips were made in an open rowboat, which was pulled to Fort Johnson and reached there at 4 o'clock.

From Fort Johnson Captain Chesnut started by boat to report to Beauregard in Charleston. He was rowed out into the harbor between Forts Johnson and Sumter and there lay to until the signal shot was seen to burst over the target.

After delivering his report to Beauregard the captain was again sent in his open boat down the harbor, now alive with shells from Sumter and all its adversaries, including Fort Moultrie. The boat reached Morris island in safety, passing under the guns which were firing vigorously. Captain Chesnut's instructions were to learn the condition of the southern batteries exposed to Sumter's shots and also that of Sumter. His boat ran out in the harbor toward Sumter, and he saw that the buildings in the fort were on fire. About that time the firing from Sumter ceased, but the flag was still waving.

Captain Chesnut determined to make one more demand for the evacuation and was preparing to go out in the boat when the United States flag suddenly disappeared from the historic walls. Word was brought from Anderson that he would evacuate, and the captain hastened to the city with the news.

The next mission of Captain Chesnut was one of mercy. The quarters in Fort Sumter had been set on fire by hot shot from Moultrie, and the condition of its magazines was not known to those outside. It was supposed that there must be some wounded needing care. A fire engine and its company were loaded on board a steamer, and with a surgeon and his staff of assistants the relief party hurried to the burning fort. On nearing the wharf the steamer was warned away by an officer in the fort, who stated that it was in danger of blowing up at any moment from the mines placed beneath the wall at that point as a means of defense.

Captain Chesnut entered the fort through an embrasure and offered the services of his firemen and surgeons to Major Anderson. Only one man had been wounded, and the fire had burned itself out. The lower magazine was under the burning ruins, but was deemed safe. The upper one had been emptied by casting the powder barrels into the sea.

Fighting on Their Own Hook.

Major Anderson gave orders that only the caseament guns of Sumter should be used in reply to the enemy. These were the guns fired through embrasures in the wall answering to the ports of a battleship. The barbettes guns on the parapet were the only shell guns in the fort. So the answering fire was of solid shot against shell. Seeing the disadvantage, tage, one of the gunners, named Carmody, stole away to the ramparts and coolly fired every barbettes gun in position on the Moultrie side. Carmody was unable to run the guns back single handed for loading and could not alone fight the whole Confederacy with suitable weapons.

GENERAL LOUIS T. WIGFALL, C. S. A., WHO ENTERED FORT SUMTER WITH A WHITE HANDKERCHIEF STUCK ON HIS SWORD.

In another part of the fort there was a ten inch columbiad in barbettes, which also came under Anderson's prohibition. It was loaded and trained, and two sergeants, watching their chances, stole into the gorge and fired it. The shot barely missed smashing the famous Confederate iron battery.

BIG FAMILY PARTY.

Peppermint Millionaire Invites All the Shoudys to a Reunion.

Any one related to Fundy E. Shoudy of Benton Harbor, Mich., the peppermint millionaire, by "consanguinity or by affinity" is eligible to participate in a monster reunion of the Shoudys. The reunion, he announces, will begin Sept. 26. He does not intimate when it will end.

Shoudy has not elucidated the phrase "by consanguinity or by affinity," which has so puzzled his friends. There is much speculation as to whether Shoudy intends the reunion as an iconoclastic demonstration against the prevailing social laws or whether he slipped a cog in his vocabulary when he was intining his announcement of the event.

Some persons take as enlightenment his supplementary remark that he expects several thousand Shoudys to attend this affair. He declares it will be the world's biggest family reunion, and this despite the fact that Shoudy is not a common name.

THRILLING SCENES AT FORT SUMTER

Hero Who Saved the Powder Magazines—Hauling Down the American Flag.

By Captain GEORGE L. KILMER.
[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

WHEN the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter on the morning of April 12, 1861, many of the men in the fort stood on the parapets or about the parade shell, which arose slowly in the air until its momentum was exhausted, then dropped toward the target. Other shells were fired, and these were watched in turn. Though they were known to be the signals of a fight that was about to open, the end of which no man could foresee, the usual roll call of the soldiers took place on the open parade ground just the same.

Redhot Cannon Balls.

There is no doubt whatever about the Confederates firing redhot shot into Fort Sumter for the purpose of setting any inflammable material there on fire. The Confederates so state themselves, and the officers in Fort Sumter would not have made the statement had it been other than true. The fire in the barracks gradually swept around toward the magazine, barrels filled with powder were rolled out under fire, and the already hot door was closed. All the blankets of the soldiers and everything else that could serve the purpose had already been wet and laid over the loaded shells, which were placed near the guns. It was decided to throw the uncovered powder overboard. This was done, but the tide was low, so the powder barrels rested on the ripraping in front of the embrasure where they were cast out. The Confederates promptly turned their guns upon this pile of powder, causing an explosion which blew the gun at the embrasure out of position. There was still a possibility that enough powder had sifted through the cartridge bags which had been carried about the day before to lead the fire into the powder chamber. Realizing this danger, Anderson called his men about him on the parade and directed that a shot be fired from the fort at the enemy every five minutes, adding incidentally that there was some danger of the magazine exploding. Some of the men dug a trench in front of the door of the magazine and kept it filled with water during the rest of the battle. Of course this thrilling moment of open powder barrels lying around had to have its hero. He was Private Hart, a soldier who had distinguished himself many times that day. Through his activity the flames were kept from spreading in dangerous quarters, and to him was given the credit of saving the powder magazines.

GENERAL ABNER DOUBLEDAY, WHO FIRED FROM FORT SUMTER THE FIRST SHOT AT THE CONFEDERATES IN THE CIVIL WAR.

The Closing Scene.

After all that followed in the wake of that first gun of Sumter, the "shot heard round the world," it is scarcely possible to realize the feelings of the Confederates and Anderson's men when finally the flag of Sumter was hauled down by the order of the highest United States authority on the spot, Major Anderson. It had been arranged to salute the flag before hauling it down with 100 guns, the usual flag salute, but the fire in the barracks was still raging. Fire and sparks were all around the cannon, and it was not easy to find a safe place for the deposit of the cartridges. As it was, flames of fire had entered the muzzle of one of the guns. When the cartridge was rammed in it exploded prematurely, killing one soldier and wounding five of his comrades. In view of this danger, the salute stopped with fifty guns. Then Old Glory came down, the first time the flag had been struck before an American foe, the first time it had been hauled in the dust by men reared under its folds. It must be said that the spectacle caused not only its gallant defenders, but its equally gallant enemies, to shed honest tears.

Accidents will happen, but the best-regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurts.

LOUISVILLE MARKET

Hogs And Cattle Both On The Drag And Lower.

Louisville, Ky., April 25.—The hog market was lower today on account of large receipts. Top hogs were 10 cents lower and sold for $6.15 with the market closing slow and weak.

Cattle—Receipts 1197 head not a heavy run, but there were more than needed and the market ruled dull and lower. Heavy butcher cattle weighing over 750 pounds were slow sale. Pretty good demand for light butcher stock. Prices 10 to 15 cents lower than a week ago.

Not much demand for spring lambs and prices lower, the best brought 6½ and 7½ cents. Fall lambs dull at 5 cents.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What A Heap Of Happiness It Would Bring To Cloverport Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that Backache pains come from sick kidneys.

'Twould save much needless woe. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys. Many residents of this vicinity endorse them.

Mrs. Charles Stephens, 526 Clay St., Owensboro, Ky., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and believe they are a good remedy. I did not take them exactly as directed but they strengthened my back and relieved me of the acute pain. When I felt better, I would stop taking them instead of continuing their use until a complete cure was effected. I have improved in many ways since using Doan's Kidney Pills and can recommend them highly to all sufferers from kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Soldiers Drilling at Jefferson Barracks in St. Louis—"They Walk on Stars, So Can You."

Uncle Sam Again Increases His Order For "Star Brand" Shoes

Early in December, the United States Government placed an order for "Star Brand" shoes amounting to $452,000. In January, this order was increased to $589,873.75. On March 14th this order was again increased and now amounts to $656,748.75

This is most convincing evidence that the United States Government believes "STAR BRAND SHOES ARE BETTER." Uncle Sam is the most critical buyer of shoes in America. He considers this the best purchase of shoes ever made and is by far the largest order for shoes ever placed with any one manufacturer. No substitute for leather can enter into the construction of shoes bought by Uncle Sam for his soldiers.

No substitutes for leather are ever used in any "Star Brand" shoes—"Star Brand Shoes Are Leather"—the same uniform, high quality is in every pair. If you are not now wearing "Star Brand" shoes, declare war on shoes containing substitutes for leather and come in and inspect my large and complete line of "Star Brand" shoes made in St. Louis, by Roberts, Johnson & Rond Shoe Co.
